

Topic: Should students have smartphones at school?

Today, almost every teenager has a smartphone. Some people think it is useful, while others believe it is a big problem at school.

On one hand, smartphones can help students learn. They can use dictionaries, search for information, or stay in touch with parents. In emergencies, having a phone is important for safety.

However, many students use their phones during class to play games or chat on social media. It becomes a distraction, and they don't focus on lessons anymore. Teachers also say it's difficult to control.

In my opinion, students should not use smartphones during lessons, but they can have them in their bags for breaks or emergencies. What matters is learning self-control and respect for rules.

“Is homework still necessary in today’s education?”

→ Write about:

- Why some people think homework helps students.
- Why others think it's useless or stressful.
- What you personally believe is the best balance.

[illegible]